Exquisite Corpse was a game conceived in 1925 by members of the Surrealist movement, and is still played today. You might be more familiar with its other name, Consequences.

Surrealism called for art to utilise the subconscious mind by drawing on dreams and automatic drawings, and playing games was one way to do this.

Many artists have famously used the Exquisite Corpse game to make work, including Man Ray, Frida Kahlo, and more recently, the Chapman Brothers.

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- 3 or more players
- A pen or pencil
- Paper

1. Pass out a blank sheet of paper (or printed attachment) to each player.
2. Fold up along the dotted lines so you can only see the top third (HEAD).
3. Draw any kind of head you can imagine, making sure the neck finishes at the line.
4. Fold the top third under so that now the blank middle section (TORSO) is visible.
5. Pass your drawing onto the next player so everyone has a new sheet.
6. Repeat for TORSO and then LEGS.
7. Once finished, unfold and see what strange creature has emerged!
